Mr. Henry Hazlitt,
Managing Editor, The Nation,
New York, N.Y.

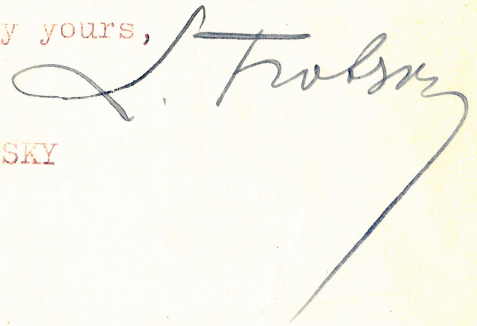

Dear Mr. Hazlitt:

In reply to your letter of September 23rd, can advise that I hope to deliver an article of the kind you want for the Nation, but this I cannot do at the present time.

Just now I am very busy completing the last chapters of the second volume of my "History of the Russian Revolution", which I must finish by the 1st of December of this year.

In January, if nothing interferes, you will receive my manuscript. I must warn you however, that I will write in Russian because I do not have anyone here who can translate it into English or American.

Very truly yours,

A handwritten signature in dark ink, appearing to read 'L. Trotsky', with a long, sweeping flourish extending downwards and to the right.
